BEDSIT BUILD TO HELP DISABLED CHILDREN

The Freddie Farmer Foundation is in the early stages of constructing a bedsit at its site in Elliott Road, Bromley.

The new bedsit will allow clients with a disabled child, who travel from all over the UK, to stay onsite in a purpose-built facility, completely catered for.

“Disabled children need quite a lot of specialised equipment and as some of our families travel a long way, it is not always possible for them to bring all that they need for their stay,” said charity trustee and founder, Danny Catchesides.

“The bedsit will supply everything they need to help them while they are here.”

The foundation will offer a special discounted rate for the families that stay in the bedsit so as well as helping the families who come to the Freddie Farmer Foundation Therapy Centre, the charity will also gain a small regular income to help towards its annual running costs.

The build started in September 2018 and will take six months to complete at a cost of £50,000.
