LokoHelp campaign now fully funded thanks to the Axis Foundation

The Axis Foundation has donated £7,500 to the Freddie Farmer Foundation's charity campaign to purchase a LokoHelp electromechanical gait trainer to enable disabled children to walk.

The LokoHelp works with children in an upright position to enable the children to walk in the correct walking pattern, it builds up the leg muscles required for walking and encourages a more effective application of therapy in all phases of gait training.

Charity officer Karen Smith said: "The Axis Foundation donation completes our £55,000 fundraising campaign total and we would like to thank everyone for their support."
